Ovid Nicholson begins his professional baseball career in 1910 after seeing a newspaper ad for tryouts with the Great Bend Millers of the Kansas State (D) League. Two years later, the 23-year-old Salem, Indiana native gains national recognition when he sets a minor league single-season record stealing 111 bases, scoring 128 runs in 117 games and hitting .313 with the Frankfort Statesmen in the Blue Grass (D) League.

OVID NICHOLSON

The fleet-footed Nicholson parlays his base-stealing talents into a late-season call-up by the National League's Pittsburgh Pirates.

On September 18, 1912, the Pirates are 30 games above .500 (84-54), but 11 1/2 games behind John McGraw's first-place Giants when Pittsburgh manager Fred Clarke gives Nicholson his first major league start in the second game of a double-header against the last-place Boston Braves.

Clarke pencils Nicholson in as the team's starting left fielder and bats the rookie third in the lineup between two future Hall of Famers - Max Carey and Honus Wagner. Nicholson collects one of only two Pirate hits - a single in three at bats off of Braves' starter George "Lefty" Tyler as the two teams battle to a 0-0 tie in a game called at the end of eight innings because of darkness.

no miscues, the Pittsburgh Press notes of Nicholson, "he is a well built chap, and seems to have a lot of strength but he showed ignorance of the game." Despite playing well, the 5-foot-9 Nicholson is returned to Louisville because it is thought that the Pirates feel he is too small.

Though his major league career is short, Nicholson will play eight seasons in the minor leagues, surpassing .300 two times. Overall, he hits .288 with 87 doubles, 29 triples and nine home runs. He also managed several seasons in the minors.

In August of 1916, Nicholson, playing for the Hannibal Mules, is leading the Three-I League with 50 stolen bases when he suffers an ankle injury that puts him out of action for the remainder of the season. After hitting .262 in 1917 with the Quincy Gems, Nicholson enters military service and leaves organized baseball at the relatively young age of 28.

Ovid Nicholson [2 of 5]:

Nicholson resumes his playing career in 1926 as a player/manager of the Central League's Ludington Tars. Nicholson has the Tars in second place with a 12-12 mark when on June 13 the four-team league merges with the Michigan-Ontario League to create an eight-team Michigan State League where Ludington finishes fifth with a 45-51 record.

In addition, Nicholson and his wife Nelle lose their daughter, Donna Rose, to illness before her fifth birthday on June 28. Following the end of the season, the Nicholsons move to Kenosha, Wisconsin, where he becomes an owner of a women's clothing store.

On March 24, 1968, Nicholson passes away in Salem, Indiana, at the age of 79.

December 1, 1912

The Pirates management announces that Nicholson and pitcher Sherrod Smith have been released to the American Association's Louisville Colonels.

"The Nicholson in question may or may not be a star. But he has a record, a peach of a record as a base-stealer. He was sent to the Frankfort club in the Blue Grass League stole bases so fast they had trouble in counting them and he was the champion base-stealer of the world last season."

-- Indianapolis Star

December 22, 1912

Nicholson's father's home in Salem, Indiana, is burned to the ground.

December 24, 1912

Nicholson informs the Louisville Colonels that his home burned to the ground destroying the contract that had been sent to him ... Nicholson asks for a duplicate so he can affix his "John Henry."

May 19, 1913

Nicholson is sold to the Nashville Volunteers of the Southern League ... the Louisville Courier-Journal reports that with the acquisition of Scotty Ingerton from Indianapolis, whose "superior batting ability" makes him more valuable to the team Nicholson's services are "no longer needed".

Nicholson relates a story that learned to slide to base by rigging up a small portion of a diamond in his father's barn and then from a running start going into a bag representing second or third base from various angles.

June 12, 1913

Less than a month after being sent to Nashville, Nicholson is recalled to Louisville ... Colonel fans made an "awful howl" when he was sold to the Volunteers.

July 3, 1913

A cigar company in Louisville produces a cigar named "Our Nick" and is wrapped in a photo of Ovid "Nick" Nicholson.

July 6, 1913

Nicholson is hitting .262 in 31 games with Louisville, when he is sold outright to the Wichita Witches of the Western League.

July 10, 1913

It is reported that one of the reasons why Louisville sold Nicholson to Wichita was his dislike of manager Jack Hayden.

Jack Hayden

January 13, 1914

Louisville manager Jack Hayden says he still regrets in sending Nicholson to Wichita last July ... "Why that kid burned up the Western Association. As soon as he got over his nervousness he commenced to murder the pill."

July 3, 1914

Nicholson leads the Western League in base hits and big league scouts are starting to find their way to Wichita in an attempt to get the Witches to part with the former major leaguer ... however, team president Patrick Breese "cannot find his way to weaken the team in spite of the fact that the money would come in mighty handy right now."

June 8, 1915

Nicholson is involved in a five-player trade with the St. Joseph Drummers ... Nicholson, third baseman Goldie Rapp and first baseman William Fisher are sent to the Drummers for third baseman Gilbert Britton, outfielder William Fox and manager Ham Patterson ... even though Nicholson hit over .300 for Wichita a year ago, club management is "in despair" about his recent slump and feels that Fox will be an improvement.

MANAGERS INVOLVED IN WESTERN LEAGUE TRADE; ALSO 5 MEN

(BY MORNING JOURNAL SPECIAL LEASED WIRE)

Wichita, Kan., June 8.—A trade involving two managers and five players of the St. Joseph and Wichita Western league baseball clubs was closed here tonight. Jack Holland, owner of the St. Joseph team, released Manager Patterson, Third Baseman Britton and Outfielder Fox to Wichita, receiving in return Ovid Nicholson, outfielder; Goldie Rapp, third baseman, and William Fisher, first baseman.

Clyde Wares, who came to Wichita from the St. Louis Browns, as a manager of the team, was bought back by his former owners. William Pownall, outfielder, who came to Wichita with Wares and who was sent to St. Louis two weeks ago, came back to Wichita.

Patterson, who plays first base, will manage the team and play that position on the local team.

April 26, 1916

Nicholson is hitting .146 (6-for-41) and is one of six players released by the Chattanooga Lookouts ... later signs with the Hannibal Mules.

August 15, 1916

Leading the Three-I League in steals (50), Nicholson suffers a season-ending injury when sliding into second base an infielder falls on his leg, pinning to the ground.

September 11, 1916
